Read the following passage about the Complex Journey of Growth and Sustainability and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 12 to 21.

[I] Gone are the days when success in tourism meant merely counting heads through turnstiles. [II] Like a master choreographer orchestrating an intricate ballet, modern tourism demands a delicate balance between visitor satisfaction and environmental stewardship. [III] In the picturesque coastal town of Port Haven, this reality has come into sharp focus, where an unconventional approach to tourism has taken root. [IV]

The whispers of change began in the town's cobblestone alleys, where local artisans transformed their workshops into living museums. Rather than cordoning off cultural spaces, Port Haven has dissolved the boundaries between visitors and craftsmen. In weathered workshops, tourists now find themselves apprenticed to local masters, their hands guided through the subtle art of boat carving or net weaving. These immersive encounters have sparked an unexpected renaissance of traditional crafts, breathing new life into practices once thought lost to time.

What sets Port Haven apart is not merely its approach to preservation, but its philosophy of fluid spaces. The town's architecture tells this story eloquently - historic fishing wharves double as open-air theaters at dusk, while morning markets metamorphose into storytelling circles by afternoon: This constant transformation reflects a deeper understanding: that spaces, like the tides themselves, need not be bound to single purposes.

The town's relationship with its marine heritage exemplifies this fluid approach. Local fishermen, rather than abandoning their traditional practices, have become the architects of a new maritime experience. Their knowledge shapes the rhythm of tourist activities, from the timing of coral reef visits to the seasonal rotation of coastal trails. This symbiosis has created what locals call "rhythmic tourism," an approach where visitors experience ebb and flow with natural cycles.

Neighboring coastal towns have begun to take notice, not of a formula to replicate, but of a philosophy to ponder. Port Haven's success lies not in rigid preservation or wholesale transformation but in its ability to maintain a constant dialogue between past and present, resident and visitor, tradition and innovation.

In any web search for the world's famous scientists, Marie Curie always receives a mention. Curie, a Polish and naturalised French physicist and chemist, discovered radiation, helped apply it in the field of X-rays, and coined the term radioactivity. She made a huge contribution to science, but was one of the very few women who gained the recognition they deserved.

Science was man's world in the nineteenth century. And yet, Mary Anning became an expert in fossils and geology. Coming from a poor family, she collected fossils on the beach and sold them to make a little money. She found fossils of complete marine reptiles that became extinct over 100 million years ago. She gained the respect of scientists, but living in an era when women weren't allowed to vote or attend university, she was not allowed to join the Geological Society of London.

A hundred years later, conditions were still difficult for female scientists. Rosalind Franklin, a chemist born in 1920, was part of a team who discovered the molecular structure of DNA. Tragically, she died aged thirty-seven, four years before her fellow scientists, all men, were awarded the Nobel Prize in 1962.

They made no reference to Franklin in their acceptance speech.

In cases where women's achievements were recognised, we still find evidence of discrimination in the way these were reported in the press. When the brilliant chemist Dorothy Hodgkin was awarded the Nobel Prize in 1964 for discovering the molecular structure of penicillin and vitamin B12, the paper headline was Oxford Housewife Wins Nobel. In fact, this housewife was also a professor at Oxford University. Today, the gender gap in the world of science is slowly closing, and there are many female scientists inspiring new generations of girls to study scientific subjects. But there are still some ways to go for women to be equally represented in science.
