Read the following passage about generation gap and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 12 to 19.

In every society, the phenomenon of the generation gap has been a persistent thread, weaving its way through the fabric of human interaction. A generation gap occurs when differences in attitudes, beliefs, values, and behaviors emerge between individuals from different age groups. This disparity often gives rise to misunderstandings, conflicts, and a sense of alienation. However, it is crucial to recognize that this generational divide can also be an opportunity for growth, learning, and enriching human connections. In today's fast-paced world, technological advancements and cultural shifts have accelerated the generation gap. The young, often referred to as the "digital natives," grow up with technology as an integral part of their lives, while their elders, the "digital immigrants," grapple with adapting to these rapid changes. These contrasting experiences shape perspectives on communication, social interactions, and even fundamental aspects of life, contributing to the widening gap.

One of the primary sources of friction between generations is communication. While older generations may prefer face-to-face conversations and more formal modes of interaction, the younger ones find comfort in the digital realm, utilizing social media, instant messaging, and video calls as their primary means of communication. These differing styles of communication can lead to misunderstandings, with the younger generation perceiving the older one as out of touch and the older generation seeing the younger one as disconnected from meaningful human interaction.

Another significant aspect of the generation gap revolves around differing value systems and beliefs. Older generations often prioritize tradition, discipline, and respect for authority, while younger ones may lean towards individuality, self-expression, and a focus on personal development. These differences in values can cause clashes over lifestyle choices, career paths, and societal norms, creating a chasm between generations that may be challenging to bridge.

Read the following passage about the changing world of work and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] Over the past few decades, the world of work has undergone a significant transformation. [II] This has empowered individuals to seek new opportunities and explore uncharted landscapes. [III] However, with rapid advancements in technology and shifting economic demands, businesses and employees alike have to adapt to new ways of working. [IV]

One of the most noticeable changes is the rise of automation and artificial intelligence (AI), which has revolutionized industries by replacing repetitive tasks with machines. While automation increases productivity and efficiency, it also raises concerns about job security, as some roles have become obsolete. However, this shift has also created new opportunities in fields like data science, cybersecurity, and digital marketing.

Another major trend is the shift towards a gig economy, where short-term contracts and freelance work replace traditional full-time employment. This change allows workers to have greater flexibility and autonomy but also comes with challenges such as limited access to employee benefits and job security. Without company-sponsored benefits like health insurance and paid leave, gig workers must carefully manage their finances and job stability.

As workplaces continue to evolve, lifelong learning has become essential. Many professionals now pursue continuous education and professional training. To ensure future career success, professionals will need to be proactive and adaptable to stay relevant and thrive in their careers. For leaders, staying competitive will require pushing for more learning initiatives within the organization, facilitating upskilling opportunities for their employees while providing and participating in leadership training. Therefore, companies should invest in employee development programs to help workers keep pace with industry changes and technological advancements.

The future of work is uncertain, but one thing is clear: adaptability and continuous learning are key to thriving in the modern job market. By embracing change and acquiring new skills, workers can remain competitive and succeed in an evolving job market.
